THE AUTHOR OF THE GERMAN NATIONAL

Ernst Moritz Arndt was born December

conents as soon as he comprehended his signs of conquest. His "Spirit of the designs of conquest. His "Spirit of the Age" went through several editions. The attention it excited by the boldness of its attacks on Bonaparte compelled Aradt to to fly to Stockholm, whence he was unable to return till 1813. His writings, which flowed in rapid succession from his indefatigable pen, made a profound impression on popular feeling. They served, it is estimated, more than any cause, to keep alive the German hatred of French domination that stimulated the war of liberation. In 1818, Aradt was appointed Professor of History in the University of Bonn; but the very next year the inquiry into "Demagogical Intriguos" was said to have implicated him. He was out of the public employment till 1820, when he was reinstated. His popular peems and war songs, of which the one given is at once the most martial and popular, were published at Frankfort in 1815 and at Leipsic in 1840:

THE GERMAN FATHERLAND.

Which is the German's fatherland! La't Prussia's or Swabia's land! La't where the Rhine's sich vintage streams' Or where the Northern sea-gull screams! Al! no, no, no! His fatherland's not bounded so:

Which is the German's fatherland! Bavaria or styres's land! Is't where the Marcian ox unbends! Or where the marksman's ion rends! Ab! no, no, no! His fatherland's not bounded so!

Which is the German's fatherland? Pomerania's or Westphulia's land? Is it where sweep the Dunian wayes? Or where the thundering Danube raves Al! no, no, no! Mis fatherland's not bounded so!

Which is the German's fatherland? Oh tell me now the famous land! Ist Tyrol, or the land of Tell? Such lands and people please me we! All no, no. no! His fatherland's not bounded so!

Which is the German's fatheriand? Come tell me now, the famous land Doubless, it is the Austrian State, In honors, and in triumphs great! Ah! no, no, no! His fatheriand's not bounded so!

Which is the German's fatherland? So tell me now the famous land! Lat what the Princes won by sleight? From the Emperor's and the Emperor Ah! no, no, no! His fatherland's not bounded so!

Which is the Gorman's fatherland! So tell me now at last the land! Far as the German accent rings,

There is the German fatherland,
Where caths attend the grasped handWhere truth beams from the sparkling
And in the heast love warmly lies;
There, brother, is thy fatherland!

That is the German's fatherland!
Where wrath pursues the foreign band—
Where very Frank is held a too,
And Germans all set brothers glow!
That is the land—
All Germany's the tatherland!

HOCKING CASES IN ST. LOUIS-TWO BOYS

THE VICTIMS.

From the St. Louis Republican, July 26.
We have another case of hydrophobia to chronicle, the victim being a boy about 16 years of age, who was yesterday removed from the Health Office to the City Hospitals of the City Hospitals THE HISTORY OF THE MARSEILLAISE On the 30th of July, 1792, the Marseil-laises arrived at Paris, whither they had been invited by Barbaroux at the instance of Madame Roland. "The secret motive of their march," says M. De Lamartine, was to intimidate the National Guard of of their march," says M. De Lamartine, was to intimidate the National Guard of Paris; to revive the energy of the Faubourgs; and to be in the advance guard of that camp of 20,000, which the Girondists had made the Assembly vote; to overrule the Feuillants, the Jacobins, the King, and the Assembly itself, with an army of the Departments composed entirely of their own creatures." The Marseillaises entered Paris by the Faubourg St. Antoine, and singing the song which bears their name, proceeded to the Champs Elysees, where a banquet was prepared for them.

The origin of the words and music of this famous song is thus described by M. De Larmartine: "There was at this time a young officer of artillery in the garrison at Strasburg. His name was Rouget de Lisle. He was born at Lons-le-Saulnier in the Jura, a country of roveries and energy, as mountainous regions always are. This young man loved war as a solding the strasburg of the garrison. Generally sought on account of his double talent as a solding and his music, he lightence the Edition of the garrison. Generally sought on account of his double talent as

Aira-sha revolution as a thinker. By his verses and his music, he lightened the tediousness of the garrison. Generally sought on account of his double talent as a musician and a poet, he became a familiar visitor at the house of an Asiatic patriot, Dietrich, Mayor of Strasburg. The wife and daughters of Dietrich shared his enthusiasm for patriotism and revolution. They loved the young officer. They inspired his heart, his poetry and his music; and trusting to the earlier lispings of his genius, they were the first to execute his searcely expressed thoughts. "It was in the winter of 1792, famine reigned at Strasburg, the Dietrich family were poor, and their table was frugal, but it was always hospitable to Rouget. One day, when there was nothing on the board but some ammunition bread and a few slices of ham, Dietrich, looking at De Lisle with melancholy calmness, said to him: 'Abundance is wanting at our banquet, but what matters that, when neither enthusiasm is wanting at our civic feasts, per course in the learts of our soldiers? dog licked one of his hands on which there was a small scar from a recent out; or else his, lips and mouth, and so the poison entered his system. It is also stated that the boy had the rash or "prickly heat" out on his arms with which the salive of the dog may have come in contact. During more than three weeks after this night the boy appeared to enjoy his usual health, and never said anything to indicate that he apprehended any misfortune or sickness. On Thursday last he complained of feeling unwell, spoke of a pain in the head and full tense feeling across the stomach. His symptoms were aggrayated next day; on Saturday a clear Lisle with melancholy calaness, said to him: 'Abundance is wanting at our banquet, but what matters that, when neither enthusiasm is wanting at our civic feasts, nor courage in the hearts of our soldiers? I have still a bottle of wine left in my cellar; let it be brought up, and let us drink to liberty and our country. There will soon be a patriotic celebration at Strasburg; may there last drops inspire De Lisle with one of those hymns which convey to the soul of the people the intoxication from whence they proceed.' The young griks applanded, brought in the winc, and filled the glasses of their aged father and the young officer until the liquor was exhausted. It was midnight. The night was cold. De Lisle was in a dreamy state; his heart was touched; his head was heated. The cold overpowered him, and he tottered into his lonely room, slowdly, seeking inspiration now in his patriotic soul, now in his harpsichord; sometimes the words before the words and sometimes the words before the words. and sometimes the words before the words. and sometimes the words before the words. The himself did not know whether the notes or the verses came first, and that it was it impossible to separate the poetry from the music, or the sentiment from the expression. He sang all, and set down nothing. "Overpowed with the sublime inspiration, De Lisle went to sleep on the harpsicord, and did not wake until day. He recollected the song of the previous night with a difficulty like that with which we recall the impressions of a dream. He now set down the words and music, and a ran with them to Dietrich, whom he found at work in the garden. The wife and daughters of the old patriot had not your risen. Dietrich awakened them, and invited some friends who were as passion, and at the last all the madness of enthusiasm is the last all the madness of enthusiasm at the last all the madness of enthusiasm at the last all the madness of enthusiasm is the last all the madness of enthusiasm is tooke forth. Dietrich, his wife, his daughters, and the anomorager was caused in, and at the time no one about the premises understood the character of the attack. It was apparent, however, to a medical eye, and the doctor quickly asked if the boy had been bitten by a dog. At first the answer was in the negative, but finally the fate of the dog, which had died a few weeks before, was recollected, and also the fact that the boy had passed a night quite close to where the brute lay, and this, if anything was wanting, settled the character of the case. The doctor used such remedies as seemed proper, and the boy's father, who lives at Rock Spring, was sent for. On Saturday, and Sunday the case developed itself in all its fearful features. The mind of the wretched boy wandered at intervals, but for the most-of the time knew his friends and his father. His eyes globed luminous with wild light as if they would start from their sockets. He panted sharp and quick like a dog suffering from heat, and frequent spasms visited him, often produced and always aggravated by the sight of water, of which he had a painful dread. He said he had gots "bad sickness," and was going to die, but he appeared to know nothing of its character. Once when a friend invited him to come to the river and bathe he shuddered fearfully, and said, "Oh, if I should full" At times paroxyams of violence seized him, and rendered it dangerous to approach him unless he was forcibly restrained. He snarled and snapped like a dog, while froth gathered on his lips and he bared his teeth like an animal. At one time he seized the pillows and other articles in the room and hurled them at his father, driving him from the apartment. In this state of fluctuating from the Health Office to the City Hospi-tal in a state fearful to witness. There is something so peculiar about cases of this slocking malady that a full statement of the particulars will be interesting, even if it forms a sad tale to read. The boy's name is Adolph Herbestel, and he has for name is Adolph Herbestel, and he has for some time been employed as waiter in the Sppreme Court Hall Restaurant on Chestnut street, opposite the Court House. He has proved himself a steady, industrious young man, and gained the respect and esteem of his employer and associates. He lived at 523 Poplar street, where most of the young men employed in the restaurant also stopped, and until recently enjoyed excellent health, and was of a robust frame and constitution. One night, about four weeks ago, the heat being very oppressive, the boy moved a portion of his bed clothes into the yard, where he slept the balance of the night. In the yard where he slept the balance of the night. In the yard where he slept the longing to the proprietor of the house, but the animal was then, so far as it is known, in a normal condition. It does not appear that young Herbestel was bitten that ened, but this was attributed to as maving rubbed it against the ground while asleep. The subsequent history of the dog was calculated to excite uneasiness, and would have done so, only neither young Herbestel nor his friends had any knowledge of his being bitten. The next morning a young man named Charlie Wold in measing through the yard noticed pain in the head and tuil tense reeing across the stomach. His symptoms were aggrayated next day; on Saturday a clear case of hydrophobia was defined. Dr. Reimberger was called in, and at the time no one about the premises understood the character of the attack. It was apparent,

A rivace at the process of contruction stems to indicate the advantages claimed for this method. It's durability clasticity and smoothness. The bottom is a new concrete which will stand either heat or cold unchangeably thereby preventing from the under side the access of water to the privement above. Upon this concrete is rolled two inches of sand on which are placed the tiers of grooved wooden blocks six inches in depth which are cement.

The standard standard is seen to be seen to deare of traction noiseless and cleanly. With this pavement the rich of the streets would be greatly decreased and if the road bed has to be broken into the partitation out can be replaced so that no sus piecon of a break would occur. The concrete composition includes elements new to any of the others before the public and which render it unalterable in the heat of the sun. West Balite street Brooklyn, has been laid with this concrete alone to the apparent satisfaction of the property owners of that great thoroughfare.

There was a dread of water, spasmy, and a frautic tendency to snep and bits. The patient yesterday afternoon was very unmanagosale, and had to be tied down to the bed.

Connecticut Centenarian— Celebration of his Birthd ()— He Sings a Song—Sketch of His Lafe.

A correspondent of the Hartford Cour-ant gives the rollowing account of the brithdar colebration of the oldest man in b rthday colebration of the oldest man in Connection:

Tan 32d of July will long be remem bered by the inhab tants of Marlborough and vie air., for on that day a century was completed by a buman being—a thing so rate in this ago of fast living, that it is worthy of commemoration, and very proper that we should pause in our rush from the cradle to the grave, and look with this veteran over the battle of life that has covered so many years, and witnessed so many changes in the history of the world. The day was fine, though very warm, and toward noon there might be seen winding over the hills and through the valleys of Marlborough and neighboring towns, loads of hot and dusty travelers, with my sterious beskets tucked away in one corner of their vehicles, all destined to the old, grav, weatherworn house on the the old, grav, weatherworn house on the utlande Ascending the hill, the first hing two observed was the old we con, gray, weather worn house on the hillside Ascending the hill, the first thing few observed was the old flag floating above the trees near the dwelling. In front of the house a nice shady abor had been erected for the protection of the tables, which were loaded with tempting edibles—the result of the kindness and instancing of the people of the town—for even sober ant. Marlborough can be stirred up upon the birthday of her oldest living son, and we must confess she did justice to the occasion. The ancient well sweep was stiff in operation, and the water from the 'old osken bucket' was never so good as on this hundredth birthday. Everything bore the marks of time like the venerable resident. Even the turkeys had a dignified ar appropriate to the surroundings. Pasang in it the front door we were met by the maker of coronous, and informed that we could go anywhere in the house except that room where the old gentleman was enjoying a little rest. Soon, however, the doors were thrown open, and all had the pleasure of seeing and shaking by the hand a centeriar in There he sat in a large arm chair a patriaren like unto the days of old erect as he always was, a splendid head of gray hair, eyes dim with a hundred years, face calm and composed, and a beautiful peace resting upon his countenance—a monument of how gently Time deals with the children true to nature. His voice was feeble, but his memory seemed fresh as ever as he welcomed one after another and with some ready remark referred to by gone dive. At three o'clock, the cerewas feeble, but his memory seemed fresh as ever as he welcomed one after another and with some ready remark referred to by gone divs. At three o'clock, the ceremonies were opened by reading of the Seriotures and prayer by Rev Mr Ruskin, of Mirlborough, the old gentleman having taken a seat at the firnt door and devoutly listening. Next followed a historical sketch of his life by Rev Hiram Bell, of Westchester, of which we will give a few extracts. "John Day Bigelow was born on the 22d of July, 1770, in the County of Hartford, Town of Glastenbury and Prish of Marlborough Two of his uncles wished him to be named for themselves, and his mother consented on conditions that they would present him with a suit of clothes, but as they would not agree to do it, she appended the name he has borne to this day. He has been married twice, his second wice having died some the nuty years so, since which time he has lived a lonely life. He has had even children, three of whom are now living. He has been a member of the Congregational Church in this place for thirty-nine years, and a faithful attendam, too the consense of the most powerful nations on the face of the earth. He voted for Washington at his re-election, and has voted at every Presidential election since that time, though not always successful, I am sorry to say, and he says he hopes ne shall live to vote once more. He has never changed his politics in all that time.

A very touching seene then followed.

politics in all that time The old gentleman wished all the children to be brought to him, and there leaning upon his cane, his head covered and his doin eyes looking cwy into the great un known, sung a few verses with a broker voice that sounded already from a fu away land Then he repeated the ter commandments, asked them a few ques tions in the catechism, and gave them som parting advice. The children sang him simple song and then retired
